

The Psychology of Relationships integral training will assist you in answering the following questions...

- How do I assist clients with their sexual issues?
- What is effective couples dialogue and how can I best teach it?
- How do I facilitate identifying a couples unique exit strategies from intimacy?
- How do I best facilitate a client to identify their temperament, attachment and relationship style?
- How can I use art and music to facilitate a couples journey?
- What is the purpose of romantic love and how does it go wrong?
- What is the science of attraction from a biochemical/brain dominance perspective?
- How to teach relationship fundamentals with the most practical and clear instruction?
- Identifying who from the past is affecting your client and their capacity to be present in relationship?
- What are the unique qualities of a couples therapist, what are the hot spots and why is this training so important?

Relationship work is central to both therapy and living a full life. Whether the work is with a client with regard to transference and counter-transference, an intimate partner, with ones-self, or with society, life demands we relate to others and be shaped by these experiences.

This training will explore the ingredients of relational health from many perspectives including Jewish Psychology, Integral Psychology, Psychoanalysis, John Gottman, Harville Hendrix (Imago), Stan Tatkin (PACT), Mask Work, Art, Dance and Body Centred Therapy. You will also gain certification to use the SAVE relationships inventory for use within your therapeutic sessions with couples and/or individuals.
